Foreword

It has been said that a good book is one which an individual opens with anticipation and closes with profit. The goal of the annual staff was to present such a book to you. In order to serve the students, teachers, and the school, we endeavored to capture the moods and emotions of those individuals who spent a major portion of the day within the confines of the South Adams Community Schools.

As you page through your yearbook, notice the expressions of surprise, meditation, triumph, and excitement portrayed in the faces of the students. Listen to the laughter of students as it bounces and echoes through the halls. Direct your attention to the silence in the classrooms where students are deep in thought. Glance at the personalities of these students which form a mixture of the fun-loving, the eager, and the studious.

The memories associated with certain pictures may affect each student differently. For one, the picture may symbolize the sweetness of a bee's honey while for another, it may recall the sharpness of a bee's sting. Whatever emotions the words and pictures stimulate, it is our hope that we have accurately reflected life at South Adams.

To the Senior Class of 1967:

Reminiscing is only natural as we attempt construction of a message of gratitude and challenge to the Senior Class of 1967. Four years ago you launched your journey as freshmen both on ventures of aspiration for growth and service. You will always share a special place in the memory of this school because you are the first graduating class of South Adams High School. Harmonious melodies filled the air as the South Adams a cappella participated in many numerous events. Their repertoire ranged from creations by Bach to selections by Rogers and Hammerstein. Under the instruction of Mr. John Bechtelheimer, the a cappella opened their concert season with performances for both the Celina PTA and the South Adams PTA. During the holiday season, the choir sang at the Christmas Concert, the Vesper Service, and made a recording for television. In February, the choir participated in the Choir and Orchestra Concert. The schedule also included a concert with Elmhurst High School. The a cappella presented a religious program at the Good Friday Services. At the close of the school year, this large musical organization took part in the Spring Concert, the Limberlost festivities, State Contest, and Pops Concert.

The football team was faced with a rugged schedule this year. Although they won only one game, they waged desperate battles to bring home South Adams victories. After playing together this season, it can be expected that this experience gained will result in some victories earned in the fall of 1967.

The South Adams Starfires ended their first basketball season with a commendable record of sixteen wins and seven losses. Much of this success can be attributed to the players' teamwork, sportsmanship and enthusiasm. Their enthusiasm was transmitted to the fans and helped create school spirit throughout the student body. Ed Zeigler was the highest scorer for the Stars while Larry Beer was the leading rebounder. The other players' well-rounded game greatly contributed to the SA victories. But no matter whether in victory or defeat, the cry of the Starfires' fans was—"We're proud of our team!"
